SPEECH AND DEBATE

by Stephen Karam

Solomon, Diwata, and Howie don't even know each other exists until Howie posts some information onto Diwata's online blog about a teacher scandal in their high school. The posting catches the eye of Solomon, who is eager to write up the story in the student newspaper. Diwata, eager to form a Speech and Debate team so that she can get her chance to shine, convinces the two boys to join the team. The three young misfits use each other to get what they want in a coming-of-age dark comedy that offers pilgrims, cyberspace, George Michael, and musical numbers.
